Observations

Women Who Drag Their Sex Into the Channels of Trade—They Can't Help It—So This Is Peace; Shall Women Work at Night?—Yes

By W. HAROLD KINGSLEY

THE entrance into business of women, bringing their sex with them, has complicated commercial life on this continent in a distressing manner and to a considerable degree.

In support of which statement we are indebted to Dr. George P. Shidler for the following testimony which was given to him by friends in business.

One is engaged in the commerce of manufacturing and selling millinery. He says this occupation was decidedly to his liking before the "modern" woman entered the picture. Now he refuses to go on the road. The reason is that he is married. And he declares that women buyers of millinery demand so much personal attention from salesmen—dinner parties, dances, automobile rides and other social entertainment—that he cannot conscientiously call on the trade and maintain peace of mind or domestic tranquillity.

THE other sells automobiles. He is single and says that he cannot in good faith get married without injuring his business. The reason is the same as that set forth by the millinery manufacturer. This salesman sells many cars to women who are in business. He finds that most of his sales are preceded, at the behest of the women prospects, by all sorts of social entertainments; that too many women demand personal attention from a salesman and that the salesman who sticks precisely to business and does not grant their social demands doesn't make many sales.

This man declares that he could not be letter faithful to a wife and satisfy the social desires of the women to whom he sells cars. So he remains single. And because he is a bachelor society loses the benefit of the children who would inherit his conscientious characteristics.

WE cannot conclude from the testimony of these two men that all women drag their sex and their feminine lures into the channels of trade. But it seems evident that enough of them do so to make commerce with them extremely complicated, not to say precarious.

Modern conditions offer a young woman the choice between a career in business and a career as a mother.

More and more are choosing the former. But though they become business women they are still women. And their feminine inheritances cannot be cancelled simply because they are engaged in pursuits formerly left exclusively to men.

WHETHER they walk in the moonlight between rows of tall trees, cuddle babies in their arms, sell ribbon over the counter, buy hats at wholesale, doctor the sick, dance on the shiny floor of a ballroom, argue law in the halls of jurisprudence, whether they follow those pursuits to which they are engaged by Nature or seek to blot out their femininity with the rubber stamps of commerce, no matter where they go, no matter what they do, the womanly impulses of Eve motivate their actions and the irresistible instinct to attract men flashes its signals from their eyes.

And this because the most powerful of all human urges is the instinct for the perpetuation of the race; an instinct that commerce cannot down.

But here they are in business and in trade—women still—and women before they are anything else. Which makes it difficult and complicated. And what are you going to do about it? Why, we will write editorials about it, Dr. Shidler, to be sure.

THE Red army, 30,000 strong, drives through the Ukraine toward the sea.

China is in a revolutionary uproar.

France battles the Riffs.

German Socialists stage a small revolt at Tellow and scores are killed and wounded.

A Greek naval squadron surrounds the island of Samos and troops will be landed to quell a man-sized revolt.

In all more than a million men are engaged today in the serious business of killing each other.

And each army is probably praying to God to bring success to its arms.

We are far, far from the goals pointed out so simply and so clearly by the Prince of Peace.

Mrs. Murray has five children. She declared that if she had to work for a living the only time she could get away from home to do it would be at night.

She might have added that the proposed law would overthrow tradition. Women have always worked nights. As a matter of fact women work all the time. What mother ever had an eight-hour day?

A law to prevent women from working nights indeed! This American penchant for writing foolish legislation on the statute books has brought us enough trouble as it is. Let's not add to our heap of crazy laws another one that has no sensible argument in its favor.

PRESBYTERIANS, Congregationalists and Methodists of Canada will unite in services this week. The union was decided by a vote of congregations of all three creeds. A number of Presbyterians refused to join and 700 of their congregations will hold out.

The experiment in union, however, will be watched with interest. When one considers the plain and simple teachings of Jesus he can find little of importance to account for the scores of jarring sects. Since the Reformation the tendency has been altogether toward the establishment of new creeds, each differing from the rest in minute details only.

The Canadian experiment at least indicates an attempt to turn the pendulum in the other direction.

THERE seems to be a race on between Mr. Munsey of New York and Mr. Curtis of Philadelphia, to see who can buy the largest number of big metropolitan dailies. It may be that in a few years four or five men will own and control all the large dailies in our country. The country weeklies and small city dailies remain the big independent group of newspapers. There are some fourteen thousand of these published and read in the homes of the people and reaching a majority of the population.

LONDON TO NEW YORK IN TWO DAYS?

Messrs. T. F. Gaynor, J. G. Navarro and A. A. Coleman discussing plans for their London-New York seaplane line in the former's office in London.

By Central Press LONDON, June 8.—Another ambitious plan to link New York and London by air is being developed here.

A group of men which includes T. F. Gaynor, J. G. Navarro and A. A. Coleman are making plans for construction of seaplanes which would make the trip from London to the United States in two days, operating on a regular schedule. They would carry passengers and mail.

Navarro build planes for war use. The plans he is working on call for construction of seaplanes larger than any known now, capable of sustaining a great load in an emergency.

The promoters see the planes as having a great advantage over dirigibles as trans-ocean carriers. Being smaller, they can be operated more cheaply, and would be easier handled in a storm or unpleasant weather.

By operating on a two-day schedule an enormous rate of speed would not be necessary, and heavier loads could be carried, including lifeboats. The plans call for every precaution for the safety of passengers.

Those engaging passage in the planes would of course pay several times the highest steamship rate, but because of the quick time it is expected there would be plenty of business to support such an enterprise.

Passengers would pay fare according to weight, and be allowed to carry only a certain amount of baggage.

One of the new planes will be built and tested before construction is begun on the others, so that all the improvements possible can be made.

It is said the service may begin some time in 1926.

Successful from the outset and still going strong, The Herald's Free Vacation Offer will close Saturday night at 6 o'clock. Already numerous boys and girls have won free trips to Catalina Islands and spending money. Several have won enough trips to take their parents and brothers and sisters.

Trips for several groups are being arranged by L. C. O'Brien, the special agent of this paper in the Free Vacation Offer. He will be glad to co-operate with Scout leaders, Sunday School teachers and other heads of groups in an effort to arrange group trips to the famous islands on the new million-dollar boat and trips in the glass-bottom boats.

Mr. O'Brien wishes to emphasize the fact that there is no limit to the number of trips one boy or girl may win. Tickets for trips will be good any time between June 13 and Sept. 5.

All boys and girls who have subscription books are requested to meet Mr. O'Brien at the Herald office, between 4:30 and 6 p. m. Wednesday.

Each day this week Mr. O'Brien will be at the Herald office from 7:30 to 9 a. m., from noon to 1 p. m., and from 4:30 to 6 p. m.

Boys and girls who have not yet enrolled may still do so.

Went to Florida Last Winter; She's Coming Back Here

For two consecutive Winters Frances Curtis of Milford, Conn., visited California. But last Winter somebody sold her on the idea of going to Florida.

She will come to Southern California next Winter.

In a letter to H. A. Treadwell of Torrance Mrs. Curtis says Florida is all very fine, but it has few flowers and no scenery, but does have plenty of hard water.

"California is superior in every way," she writes, "and we will be back there next Winter."

Ramey, twirling for the Oilers, led the railroad men down with five bingles. After the first inning when they scored once on three hits, Ramey held them in the "low" of his hand. He also helped clinch the victory by connecting for a circuit clout.
